

PATRICK MARSHALL is a videographer who work's with people to achieve their aspiration of one day becoming a star, visually.

Although Patrick has hundreds of commercials, music videos, short stories and documentaries in his portfolio, Patrick knows that in the art of Videographer, it can take a person more than 20 years to perfect their craft.

After being nominated for Videographer of the year, he took that as a sign that he may have a lot of knowledge to share with others with the same passion that he has.

Although Patrick came from a poor upbringing, he has always believed that Kentucky, the state in which he was born, "takes care of their own". With Patrick's Grandmother dying when he was only six years old, being in foster care which made him a ward of the state, and other indiscretions, Patrick credits his success to, "The Creator", and the State of Kentucky.

Although Patrick never got the chance to attend a University for video editing, he takes satisfaction in spending more than 30,000 hours working on his craft. Patrick has recently written a "how-to" guide on how to create some of the most captivating effects that you will see on the big screen called "THE VIDEOGRAPHER'S HOLY GRAIL".
