UNESCO-UNEVOC

The UNESCO-UNEVOC International Centre for Technical and Vocational Education and Training is the International Centre for connecting UNESCO Member States worldwide to develop and strengthen technical and vocational education and training (TVET).^[1] The International Centre is located at the United Nations Campus in Bonn, Germany and is financed by both UNESCO and the German government.^[2] UNESCO-UNEVOC works in the context of UNESCO's mandate "to lead and coordinate Education 2030 (<https://openlearning.unesco.org/partners/education-2030/>) through guidance and technical support".^[3] It undertakes its activities through a global network of TVET institutions comprising departments of ministries, national TVET bodies, Universities, and nationally leading training centers.^[4]

International Centre for Technical and Vocational Education and Training of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

Abbreviation	UNESCO-UNEVOC
Formation	2002
Location	Bonn, Germany
Head of Office	Friedrich Huebler
Website	unevoc.unesco.org (https://unevoc.unesco.org/)

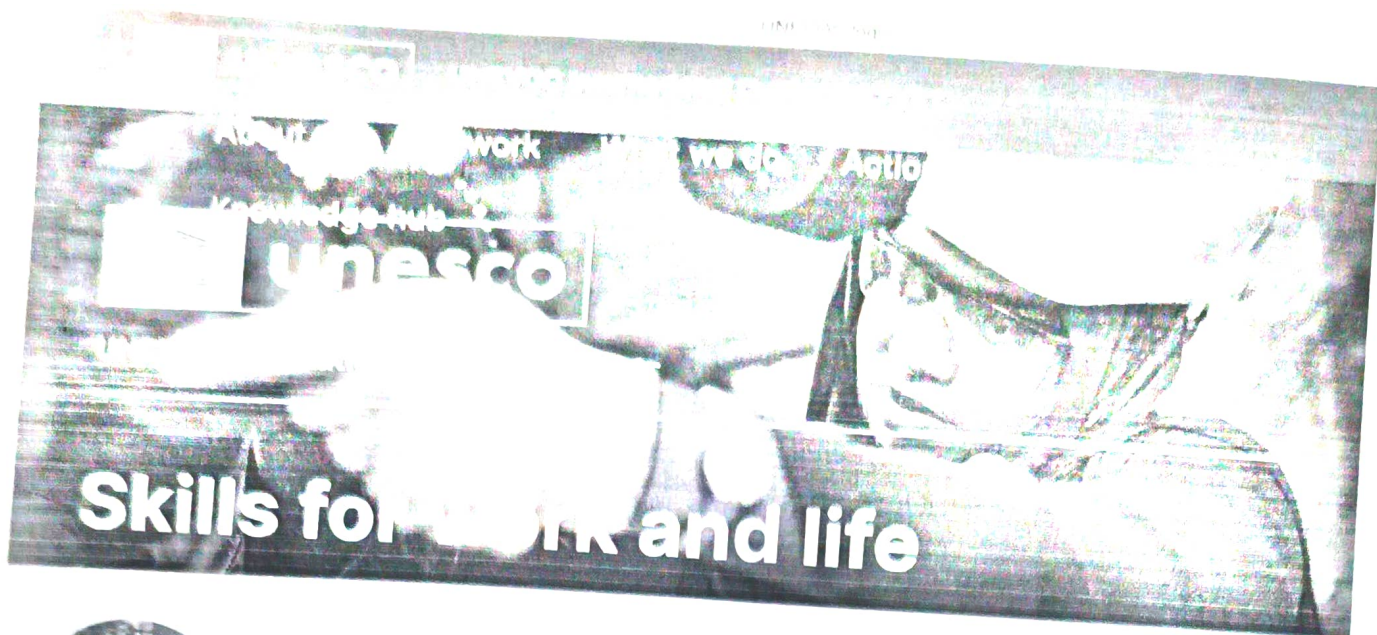

History

In 1989, the United Nations recognized that the "development of technical and vocational education should contribute to the safeguarding of peace and friendly understanding among nations" and was, as such, part of a UN Mandate.^[5] In this context, an "International Project on Technical and Vocational Education" was initiated and the "UNEVOC Network" was officially launched in 1992.^[6]

The UNESCO-UNEVOC International Centre was created in 1999 based on the decision of the 30th UNESCO General Conference.^[1] A year later, UNESCO and the German government agreed on hosting the International Centre within the Langer Eugen building, the former building for the German members of parliament which is now part of the UN Campus.^[7] The new facilities were inaugurated in April 2002.^{[8][9]} UNEVOC is hosted and partly financed by the German government.^[2]
