

Stacy Gold

Award-winning author and outdoor adventure athlete Stacy Gold gave up her day job as communications director of a nonprofit mountain biking organization to write steamy romance novels filled with independent, adventurous women —and the men who can't resist them. After making a living writing all kinds of non-fiction for more than 15 years, it's the most fun she's ever had with a keyboard and screen.

Stacy would rather be in the middle of nowhere than almost anywhere else. To that end, she's run more than 50 rivers in three countries, been heli-dropped into remote ski huts multiple times (and made it into even more under her own steam), and most recently completed a self-support kayak trip in the Grand Canyon. She has worked for the U.S.D.A. Forest Service as a backcountry ranger, river ranger, and naturalist, and spent fourteen years as a commercial river guide and kayak instructor in the southeast, Rocky Mountains and PNW.

Gold has released three ski romance novellas and a boxed set with Wild Rose Press. When she's not busy reading or writing, you can find her dancing, laughing or playing hard in the mountains with her wonderful hubby and happy dogs.
