Choose the right material for the right job.

Prismatic ~ Wet conditions

This material reflects back color and utilizes thousands of micro-prisms that are covered by a transparent film. Due to this protective layer, it performs exceptionally well in wet conditions and resists abrasion compared to glass bead.

Glass Bead ~ Warm conditions

Silver glass bead material is made of microscopic glass beads adhered to fabric, which creates a more flexible and lightweight reflective option. While ideal in many environments, especially warm ones, its largest drawback is that it loses reflectivity when wet and can abrade in rough environments.

Your garment's reflective material should stand out from the work environment.

- \\ HyperKewl absorbs, stores and releases water within the multi-layered structure.
- \\ The fabrics cool itself through evaporation and a chill effect is created.

Your name here.

High-quality custom printing solutions.

Make an investment in your brand—and your people—with high-quality, custom printing. Our in-house graphic design and screen print facility services specialize in traditional screen printing, reflective graphic transfers and die-cut numbers and letters (reflective and non-reflective). We can tell you the best application for your specific fabric—including expensive fire-resistant materials—to ensure your garments come out right the first time. Plus, our imprint technicians rigorously test everything to make sure your items get the correct temperature requirements, eliminating shrinkage, unusual rippling of the tape or anything else that might distort your garments. Let the experts handle all your printing and graphic needs.
