28th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Making Choices: The Heart of Discipleship

Today's Gospel isn't just about money; it's about the choices we make in life. The man who comes to Jesus has many possessions, but those possessions are not his real problem. His true challenge is the belief that he can have it all—he wants to be a disciple while holding onto everything he already has. He follows the commandments and is a good person with resources to accomplish many good things. But when he asks Jesus what more he can do, Jesus responds by asking him to make a choice. Jesus tells him, "You can be my disciple and inherit eternal life, but first, you must let go of something you already hold dear."

The tragedy of this man's story is that he cannot do it. He is unwilling to give up his possessions, and so he walks away sad. His experience reminds us that in order to embrace certain things in life, we must be willing to let go of others. We cannot have it all. This truth applies to every aspect of our lives. To say yes to something important often requires saying no to something else, even if what we are giving up is good in itself.

For example, to say yes to the intimacy and support of marriage, we must say no to the freedom that a single life offers. Committing to a spouse means letting go of every other potential partner, which can be difficult, but it's essential for deep, lasting love. Similarly, saying yes to a challenging job that stretches us and helps us grow often means saying no to the comfort of a job that may feel easier but offers little in terms of growth. Building meaningful, lifelong friendships requires that we say no to developing other, more casual relationships, simply because we cannot invest deeply in everyone we meet.

This is not an easy path. In fact, the Apostles themselves are overwhelmed by this idea, asking, "Then who can be saved?" Jesus' response gives us hope: "For human beings this is impossible, but not for God. All things are possible for God." When we are called to make difficult choices, to let go of something we love for the sake of something greater, we may feel that we lack the strength to do it on our own. But Jesus reassures us that we are not alone in these decisions. God is with us, and with God's help, all things are possible.

So, we are invited to look at our lives and discern what truly matters most. Then, we can pray, "Lord, you have shown me what to do. Give me the strength to let go of whatever holds me back from choosing what is most important. Teach me to say yes by learning to say no."

Fr. Leonard
