

All health sciences academic institutions need education resources covering all aspects of health and wellness, including mental health, nutrition, pre-hospital, physical/occupational therapy and pre-hospital. All resources should have current information. No medical publications, such as journals.

Step-by-step shipping instructions and important information are available on the GML website. Simply click the “Shipping Instructions” button.

Current Health Sciences Recipient

Angola

Office of Security Cooperation (OSC) Luanda

Attn: GML

2550 Luanda Place

Dulles, VA 20189-2550

The Office of Security Cooperation (OSC) at the US Embassy in Angola works with the Armed Forces of Angola. The director of Angolan Military Services is requesting textbooks, specifically with reference to infectious diseases, emergency response and trauma care and healthcare best practices, as well as formal and continuing educational medical textbooks, including anatomy. Portuguese, Spanish and English textbooks, magazines and other professional literature are welcome. Please note, medical journals and professional literature are only useful if published within the last 12 months.

Colleges of Veterinary Medicine Recipients

Ghana, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, and Ethiopia

Hans Goertz

University of Tennessee Institute of Agriculture (UTIA)

McCord 101C, 2640 Morgan Cir Drive, Knoxville, TN 37996

The University of Tennessee (UT) has been selected to host a cohort of 10 African veterinary professors by the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Faculty Exchange Program. This program is designed to assist developing countries to improve their agricultural education, research, and extension programs through exchanges with U.S. universities. The cohort of African veterinary professors will spend the fall 2021 semester under the guidance of a faculty mentor at the UT Knoxville campus. They will participate in coursework, research activities, and field visits during the exchange.

Continues on page 2

The UT College of Veterinary Medicine is requesting veterinary textbooks and references to send with these professors when they return to their home institutions in Ghana, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, and Ethiopia. The Faculty Exchange Program will pay for additional checked luggage for the participants return travel.