

David Jarrett

A journalist and ministry creative attending Southeastern University. I currently work for SEU Creative as a Student Leader Journalist, in which I write and edit blog posts, manage the school website, and connect with students & faculty on campus through interviews. I am also a Multimedia Journalism major, in which I am learning basic photography, digital video editing, news writing, and front-end development of HTML, CSS, and Javascript.

Nice to meet you!

"Journalism can never be silent: that is its greatest virtue and its greatest fault. It must speak, and speak immediately, while the echoes of wonder, the claims of triumph, and the signs of horror are still in the air."

Beauty in variety

Becoming a lifelong learner

Living for new experiences whether it's work, travel, or everyday life, brings life some more variety and opportunities to learn and grow. That's why I like trying new things and learning new skills every day to grow in each area of my life.

Learning is not a temporary state of concentration. Not defined by education or life skills, but by how we treat other people and the knowledge we teach ourselves each day. I love learning new skills and promoting a teachable attitude while working with those who are experts in their field.

Missions Practicum

As a journalist here, I am constantly meeting new people and sharing stories with the SEU Community in the form of interviews, blogs, web content, and more. I love that I get to be involved on campus all by sharing people's unique stories with the world.

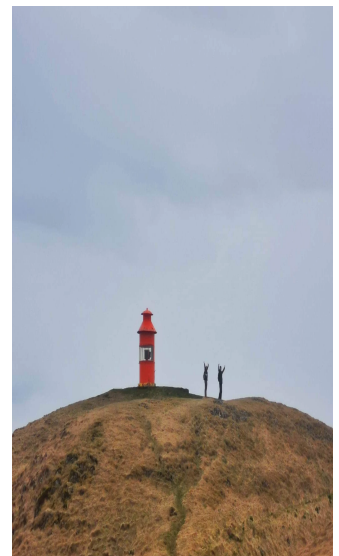

My Website

A current work in progress passion project. My website was created to tell the story of my life and to hold all of the content and accomplishments I have achieved. Check it out at www.thewafarers.world.

I am currently taking a missional practicum with SEU, focused on gaining practical skills for the workplace while partnering with a missions organization. This practicum allows me to gain real world job experience with a focus on ministry and my major.

Practical Skills

A big focus on my college career and life currently involves learning practical skills. I am currently learning how to take headshots on a camera, edit videos, and learn how to code basic HTML, CSS and JavaScript functions.
