

Saving Our Community

Heroin, Opiates, Illegal prescription drugs
There's so many different options
It will find the white collars and the poor thugs
Even you may find the addictive concoctions
Which will slowly bring you to darkness
With a neverending harshness

The victim count has taken a steep slope
Here comes the deadly epidemic
With each person gone that lost their last hope
And gone goes generations that carried the genetic
And gone goes a potential that could have been
Which one might question now and again

"Why not stop?" Ignorance begins to spew
Little knowing a drug's strong addiction
That will take hold of the entire being of you
And not let go till you have lost all ambition
You will be forever be stuck with that craving
And may be forever in need of saving

Here is a family without a care in the world
Soon comes a tragedy which one person brought
They want to go back before everything unfurled
Torn from the blissful peace they once thought
Now they fight and one is forever gone
A family torn apart with no way of moving on.

If only communities were more aware
Of the deadly effects of the drug's dangers
One helping thought can say that you care
Saving our community from these deadly strangers
Is what we really need to share
For there is no telling how much left we can bare
