

But I'm Just a Regular Person

My friend said heroin felt dreamy,
the offer I couldn't ignore.

I'm just a regular person,
who's not an outcast anymore.

The calm feeling was amazing,
my loneliness came to its end.
I'm just a regular person,
having a good time with a friend.

It felt refreshing in the moment,
and not feeling it is a bore.
I'm just a regular person,
so why not do it just once more?

I know addiction can be deadly,
but surely just once more won't bind.

I'm just a regular person,
who's in control of my own mind.

Except now it's become a habit,
and without it I feel lousy.
I'm just a regular person,
but these days it makes me drowsy.

Maybe I do have an affliction,
this isn't who I want to be.
But I'm just a regular person,
so how could this happen to me?

Amelia Lamont, 8th Grade
Dayton Regional STEM School
Ms. Miller & Ms. Curran