Wěl is a ring of 8 ottomans that symbolizes the Medicine Circle. For centuries, Aboriginal people have used the four compass directions of the Medicine Circle as a tool for learning and teaching. Separated into 4 different colors, each color represents a different aspect of the teachings. The number four has many significant meanings for Aboriginal people, some of which include directions, stages and aspects of life, seasons, elements of nature, animals, and ceremonial plants. Today, Wěl can be used as a valuable teaching and conversational tool to connect all people to the Indigenous culture.
