

Supervisor's thoughts for March

March has been a very exciting time with the weather teasing us with glimpses of warm beautiful days. Then a quick snap back into cold snowy days to remind us, we have to wait.

I got to partake in the Brewing Conflict sponsored by The Wayne County Historian's Office, Hosted at the Rose Grange by the Rose Historical Society. Let me tell you how delightful it truly was. There were Historical members dressed in the era. As you walked in, they took your name and gave a goody bag and a little mug cup. They asked if you wanted to dress up as well. Local vender groups and Informational tables greeted you as you made your way into the scene room. As you found a place to sit, there was a table master who lead the conversations after each scene and also had a role in some of the skits. There was era trivia games and songs.

The hard work putting this all together was incredible, and it truly showed. Sitting back absorbing it all in, the Historical Society really made you feel like you where there on the cusp of the Revolutionary War. It definitely made you respect the determination and resilience of those who came before us. The courage of those who gave their all for the future generation's way beyond their years. Very remarkable and humbling to say the least. When the event was finished, I was sad. I really didn't want it to end. My heart was full and proud by those who paved the way 250 years ago.

A big Thank you for all involved. Your love of History really shows and dedication in keeping it alive will carry us into the future another 250 years. My thought is if you don't know where you are from you don't know where you are going. Please watch for The Town of Rose Historian Tish Miller's article in the Figure Lakes Times April 10th and If you have the opportunity to attend the next Brewing Conflict on May 3rd located in Macedon, I highly recommend. You won't be disappointed. Thank you, Christine Rice,
