CHILDREN'S PROGRAM NEWSLETTER

April 2021

When we talk about Simplicity, I often think of that saying attributed to Gandhi, "Live simply, so that others may simply live." But what does that really mean?

To me, living simply so that others may simply live helps me remember that most of our resources (the things we use to have the lives we want) are not renewable. There is only so much money, food, oil, water, time on earth. When we use those resources it's hard, sometimes impossible to create more. I love the book If the World Were a Village.

Share? Is there a difference, or is it basically the same?

Have you ever eaten in a cafeteria? Maybe at school or somewhere else? Imagine you are going through the line at the cafeteria and you get to the dessert section and there is nothing left. All around you you see people with large slices of delicious looking chocolate cake on their trays, you ask for some but the cafeteria worker says they cut the slices of cake too big and so they ran out, there isn't any left for you. You go and
