Take care of your plant babies!

Arizona can be a hard environment to garden in.

There are many factors that make it difficult:

1. Weather events
2. Soil drainage conditions
3. Planting practices
4. Animal and insect pests
5. Environmental conditions altered by chemical use (these could be pre-existing in your soil, or drift in from other applications)
6. Irrigation systems and practices

Please do not hesitate to contact us at the first sign of distress.

Most plants can be saved if immediate action is taken. 90% of the issues we deal with are the result of underwatering. Most new plants in our arid environment require water twice per day, everyday for their first summer.

Think of your new plant as if it were a puppy.

If you left a puppy in the full sun, how many days would it survive without water?

*Except cactus, cactus are definitely not puppies.*
