

An Ode to the Land, the Vine & the Southwest

Long before the Sonoran Desert was divided by borders, the land was shaped by the sun, the mountains, and the changing seasons. A place of rugged beauty, where towering saguaros stand beneath endless skies and life flourishes against the odds.

Mexico's winemaking heritage dates back more than 400 years. In 1597, Spanish settlers established one of the oldest wineries in the Americas in Coahuila. Centuries later, that pioneering spirit found new life north of the border, where Arizona's modern wine industry began taking root in the 1970s.

Unlike the lush vineyards of Europe, the wines of the Southwest are born of a different kind of beauty. Sun-soaked days, cool nights, rugged mountains, and mineral-rich soils shape wines as bold and distinctive as the landscapes themselves. From the high desert vineyards of Arizona to the historic wine regions of Northern Mexico, each bottle tells a story of perseverance, tradition, and the untamed land.

At Alma, we honor this shared heritage with wines made for good food, great company, and stories worth sharing, just as they have been for generations.

Raise a glass to the untamed spirit of the Southwest!
