Bukchon Hanok Village

You can't visit Korea without exploring Bukchon Hanok Village, a picturesque area filled with traditional Korean houses (hanoks). Wander through the narrow alleys and experience the charm of historical Seoul.

Bukchon Hanok Village will capture your heart. It's one of the few places in Seoul that still preserves Korea's traditional past. Dating back over 600 years to the Joseon Dynasty (1392-1910), Bukchon Hanok Village was once home to royals, aristocrats, wealthy families, and government officials who lived in the beautifully crafted hanok houses here. The defining characteristic of Bukchon is its hanoks—traditional Korean houses built from natural materials like Korean red pine, earth, and stone.

"Bukchon" means "northern village" in Korean, as it lies north of central Seoul, above Cheonggyecheon Stream. Tucked between the iconic Gyeongbokgung and Changdeokgung Palaces, Bukchon Hanok Village almost faced redevelopment in the 1960s, but local residents protested and managed to protect the area from modernization. Thanks to their efforts, the legacy of the Joseon Dynasty endures in this historic enclave.

VISIT ICONIC MUSIC VIDEO LOCATIONS

Hyango Beach Bus Terminal, also dubbed "Bangtan Bus Stop," is where the album cover for BTS' "You Never Walk Alone" and the music video of "Spring Day" were shot. We will have plenty of time for Instagram worthy photos as well as spending a little time in the sun.

Then we will be moving on to Maengbang Beach in Samcheok-si, Gangwon-do, the location where BTS had their photo shoot for their album Butter. When you first enter the beach, you immediately see the famous brightly colored chairs and umbrellas reproduced from the BTS shoot. Next to the chairs is a volleyball net and balls where you can play with friends and create your own memories.

The Mosun Aerodrome in Jecheon, North Chungcheong Province, South Korea, has become a tourist hotspot thanks to its use in BTS's "EPILOGUE: Young Forever" music video. Interest in visiting the site increased alongside the group's worldwide popularity. The defense-owned airport was constructed in 1950 as a training ground for preventing war and establishing a peace regime and is now mostly used as a public park. Coffee shops and restaurants have cropped up near the empty runway in Goam-dong as more tourists flock to the area, adding to the tourist attraction.

Jamsil Olympic Stadium in Seoul, South Korea, is a historic multi-purpose stadium that was originally built for the 1988 Summer Olympics.
