The Oratorio Society of Utah proudly dedicates this 108th year performance to: Dr. Morris Franklin Lee 1934 ~ 2023

This is not an exaggeration or an overstatement. Music was his passion. He was very gifted in his craft and he never stopped sharing his abilities with others.

Through his career, Morris served as a Choral Director in the Granite School District in the greater Salt Lake City area. For 29 of these years, he was the Choral Director at Cottonwood High School where his impact and influence can only be characterized as “distinguished” and “stellar.” Perhaps worth noting is the fact that all of Morris’ own children have met or even known many of Morris’ former students and can attest—he was absolutely beloved by them.

During Morris’ tenure at Cottonwood, the school was arguably the producer of the highest quality musical performances in the state at that level. In addition to producing award winning choirs and musicals, Cottonwood’s musical productions filled the school’s 3,500 seat auditorium, night after night. Among many other honors and accolades, Morris was the recipient of the 1994 Music Educators Association Outstanding Music Educator award, the 1995 Granite School District Teacher of the Year award, and the 1996 Music Educator of the Year award. And many of Morris’ students went on to attain notable accomplishments in the field of music, including attending and graduating from the prestigious Julliard School of Music.

In addition to his work at Cottonwood High School, Morris was Director of the Oratorio Society of Utah for 28 years. This choral group has a rich 108-year history performing across the country and abroad and has been featured on various radio and television networks including NBC, CBS and PBS. Perhaps the Oratorio Society of Utah is best known for the annual tradition of performing Handel’s Messiah in venues such as the Salt Lake Tabernacle and University of Utah’s Libby Gardner Concert Hall. For his work at the Oratorio, Morris received the Governor’s Award for the Arts in 1990.

Morris was an innovator and pioneer in music education, starting the first electronic keyboard lab in the State, enabling students to attain knowledge and skills pertaining to the use of digitized keyboards, recording, and other music producing technologies. “Hallelujah and Amen” for a life well lived.
