This group exhibition examines the rhythm of life and draws inspiration from Joseph Campbell's publication "The Ecstasy of Being", which digs deep into his fascination with the connection between myth and artistic form and human psychology. With the idea that life is a never-ending cosmic dance, our show explores the rhythm of life, from joy and ecstasy to sorrow and suffering.

Rhythm is essential for both the art of living and the art of creation. Since rhythm is one of the most healing energies on the planet, being in touch with the world leads to an alignment with ourselves and our greater world. The show emphasises finding harmony with one's true nature and centres on the notion that, in the words of Joseph Campbell, "art is the funnel through which soul is poured into life."
