AUCTION

- 2000 Christies -"French Bulldog
2019 Phillips - « Warriors Shadow »

My sculpture specialty is Animal Form. My credo is Naturalism, representation of subject matter truthfully, without artificiality, but at extreme poles of emotional spectrum where tension runs high, happiness is overjoyed, and power is overwhelming. My artform is Realism, the one that requires profound knowledge of the anatomy, but has a strong artistic expression rooted in understanding of character and the life circumstances that bring out most unusual forms of movement and energy.

My home country is Ukraine. Not only had it empowered me with the best education, but also inspired, as it was muddling through the turbulent 1990s of social awakening, my pursuit of the national and international idea of revival. I seek best examples of the Greatness in nature and civilization; much like I admire untamed horses of the steppe, I deeply relate to the bravery and nobility of Cossacks', I look up to the historical figures through centuries and millenniums, I strive to be worthy of my great forefathers in my work.

The only way I know is forward and up; there is no time to chase the golden calf. My secret for success comes from a simple observation: a good birthday gift will be the one you like yourself and not the one you don't mind giving away. Years of my work has proven to me the formula of sculpting: everyone will fall for a piece that the artist created with passion and admiration. I hope my works speak for themselves.

Having moved to the U.S. in 2013, Oleg was interested in monumental projects. So in 2017, the "The Game" monument in the city of Fenton was born.

Unveiled on October 5, 2017, "The Game" depicts August 24, 1837, poker game between William Fenton, Robert LeRoy, and Benjamin Rockwell to decide who would name the town. Fenton won and named it after himself.

In 2019 began work on the WWII Legacy memorial in Royal Oak. He believes that this kind of work is most meaningful for future generations.

The saturation of the global art market, made Oleg returns to sculptures with crystals.

In 2020 he opened a gallery in USA, which allowed him not only to participate in worldwide international art shows but also to represent other artists looking to be seen.
