On MONDAY, October 18, the Sedalia Symphony Orchestra will perform its first concert in nearly twenty months! We are thrilled to welcome some new members to the ensemble, as well as our new conductor, Dr. Jerrode Marsh. The symphony will return this season with the purposeful theme of CELEBRATION, performing rousing music to revel in their reappearance! You won't be disappointed with this program, which will include music by Ralph Vaughan Williams, Antonin Dvorak and Aaron Copland. Members of the Missouri National Guard Band will also be our featured guest ensemble, helping to kick off the new season with a variety of festive pieces sure to send you home eager to return again in December!

Partial funding for this project provided by the Missouri Arts Council, a state agency.

Funded in part by an award from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Missouri Arts Council.
