Good morning everyone!

I like to get outside for an hour or two every day and work on my yard projects. Wow, not much chance of that this past month. We had fourteen inches of rain here in March; kept me indoors most of the month. I'm hoping for better weather here in April. Oh, wait... what's that saying? "April showers bring May moss"?

"I told my doctor I broke my arm in two places. He told me to stop going to those places."

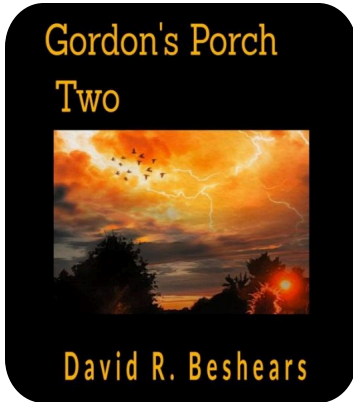

This Issue's Quote...

This one is a bit different, not so much a quote as a groan quote from some grandpa somewhere...

Projects and... more projects

One positive to the weather keeping me indoors most of the month is I had a little more time each day to dedicate to my writing, and there was a lot to do in March. I had a novella to finish and prep to publish, a short novella to outline, an epic novel sequel to get started on... oh, and I'm sketching out an animated screenplay adaptation of Mrs. Weddington's Yard. It's gonna be a great year.

Gordon's Porch Two

Speaking of a novella to finish and prep to publish... the Gordon's Porch sequel is in final edit and is about to move to publish stage. It will be available in all formats, with Kindle ebook available first, followed soon after by paperback and large print paperback; the hardcover edition should be available by the end of the month. Watch this space... or, you know, the greybeard website.

Climb the Mountain - Readers' Favorite

I finally decided to submit the Climb the Mountain memoir for a review and it just received the Readers' Favorite Five Stars award. Written in 2010, it details our family's journey to bring our son back from his severe traumatic brain injury.

"Readers who relish memoirs about family strength, perseverance, and personal determination will find the story quite moving. By framing the recovery journey as climbing a mountain, the title offers a powerful metaphor for overcoming obstacles and moving forward even when the path is steep. Climb the Mountain is a beautifully told story."

The Black Tower - ebook only .99

For three days only, you can get the Kindle ebook edition of The Black Tower for only .99.

This has always been one of my favorites, and it's cool that it's also so well-received by folks from Australia to Great Britain, from Canada to here in the US, and has received the Readers' Favorite Five Stars award.

"The Black Tower by David R. Beshears is one of the most unique books I've ever read.... The threads of each story weave together, wrapping you up like a spider with its prey and holding on tight until you reach the thrilling conclusion." – Readers' Favorite reviewer

April's Book of the Month

Planet of Stones is April's book of the month. The novella was the recipient of the Readers' Favorite Five Stars award a while back and recently placed finalist in a literary competition. The screenplay adaptation has placed finalist in multiple screenwriting competitions.

"The novella skillfully blends science fiction, adventure, and ethical quandaries, creating a narrative that is engaging and thought-provoking."

– Readers' Favorite reviewer
