Hello everyone!

Weather conditions are making going out on the trail a bit less attractive these days, though to be honest I distinctly remember (distant past) going on quite a few hikes in the rain. I recall on one occasion sitting alongside the trail eating a rain-soaked sandwich and not thinking anything of it. Ah, but I was much younger then. Not sure why that matters, but I'll take it.

"My mission in life is not merely to survive, but to thrive; and to do so with some passion, some compassion, some humor, and some style."

— Maya Angelou

Think, think, think...

With the Mrs. Wellingtons' Yard novella project finishing up in the next few weeks, I've been considering which literary project to pick up next. I spoke of this in the last newsletter, and I highlighted the possibility of going with the sequel to one of my earlier titles, these being Gordon's Porch, The Black Tower and Willow City. I closed the article asking your thoughts on which you would like to see first and response was about even.

So... for now I'll continue fleshing out the outlines of all three and wait to see which one pushes hardest at the gate. Oh, I also have another project I've been outlining.

New Titles Coming in 2026

Whichever project I go with first, I'm still hoping to publish all three sequels in 2026, and maybe the individual novel I've been busily outlining over this past year. Completing all four would be a challenge for sure, but I'll be giving it a go. Okay, realistically, two for sure, three if things go really, really well.

Yeah, and that doesn't include the next edition in the At Variance collection series nor the five other projects sitting in my holding queue.

Greybeard Specials Page

New on the greybeard publishing website, the Specials page details specials and discount offers, and highlights special opportunities. Also listed for a brief time, find several of the events from last month's Autumn Leaves Book Days that are still available. Be sure to check it out: greybeard publishing
