Hello everyone!

I thought I'd take a look back at 2025.

Cool, accomplished quite a bit:

- > Four of my titles published (multiple formats), two of these being book one in a pair of planned trilogies
- > The stageplay adaptation of The Storekeeper posted onto a major stageplay marketplace
- > Most of the titles that I uploaded to Readers' Favorite received their Readers' Favorite Five Stars award
- > Several of the screenplay adaptations of my titles were finalists in screenwriting competitions

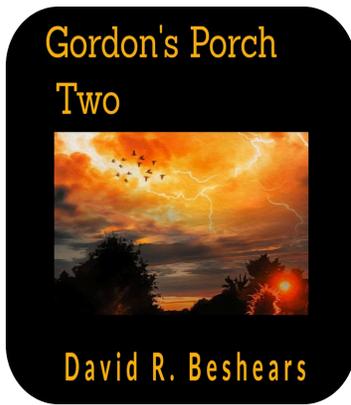

Yes, that's me looking up at my mommy

"You're in my spot."

Gordon's Porch Two - Project Status

So... I've been 90% focused on developing Gordon's Porch Two novella the last couple of weeks, and I'm making great progress on the manuscript. The extensive initial outline I worked on earlier has made the development much easier, though of course there are always a number of redirects once the characters start making their own demands on where they want to go.

Nonetheless, based on the last few weeks and looking to what's ahead, I'm ready to set some tentative goals. Plan is to have the manuscript completed by the end of February and then go into publishing mode the first week of March. Kindle ebook, paperback, large print paperback and hardcover each need their own manuscript format, and then each starts down its own publishing path. Final goal is to have all editions available mid-March.

Recipient of the Readers' Favorite Five Stars award:

"David R. Beshears does a great job of capturing what animals may think or feel in Mrs. Weddington's Yard. I found myself caring about them and empathizing with their fears, which is a sign of good storytelling... Anyone who likes fantasy-driven stories about animals with a touch of heart will love this book." – Jenny Alexander, Readers' Favorite Reviewer
