Background Screening

- Background checks are often requested by employers on job candidates for employment screening, especially on candidates seeking a position that requires high security or a position of trust, such as in a school, courthouse, hospital, financial institution, airport, and government. These checks are traditionally administered by a government agency for a nominal fee, but can also be administered by private companies. Results of a background check typically include past employment verification, credit history, and criminal history. The objective of background checks is to ensure the safety and security of the employees in the organization. Today, almost all firms run background checks on candidates before offering the job.

Address Verification

- Residential Address Verification is done through a physical site visit or database check. Our field staff visits the current/permanent/previous or all the addresses of the candidates as requested by the employer. During the visit house, street, GPS Coordinates, and signature of the verifier are captured and shared with the employer. This is available for selected locations only. This is often done in conjunction with criminal checks, as in the majority of states police records are decentralized at the local police station levels.

Employment verification

- Employment Verification is a very useful tool to dig out the information about the past employment history of the candidate. Difference between what a candidate is stated in his/her resume about his past employment and what as per HR records of that company could mean a serious integrity issue and can be the reason for a serious issue. Employment Screening can conduct with any or all of his/her past employers shown by him in his/her resume or declared in employee information form at the time of joining. We are equipped with extensive network and domain expertise to provide you the accurate and useful information.

Education Verification

- Education background checks mitigate the risk of hiring unqualified and untruthful candidates. Approximately 30% of applicants submit false, inaccurate, incomplete or misleading information to prospective employers. Don't let a candidate slip through with inaccurate information.

Criminal verification

- A background check or background investigation is the process of looking up and compiling employment history, criminal records, commercial records, and financial records of an individual or an organization. The frequency, purpose, and legitimacy of background checks varies between countries, industries, and individuals. A variety of methods are used to complete such a check, from comprehensive data base search to personal references.

CIBIL Check

- A credit check is a credit score that is provided by a govt. recognized credit bureau used by employers to ascertain the financial stability of the candidate. Credit History screening reports are recommended for employees who may impact company finances. This necessarily includes all employees in accounting functions, but may also include other employees such as those that are provided with a corporate credit or purchasing card. The candidate's details will be available subject to the creation of credit history wherein a score will be provided. In case the candidate's name not available in the database, the charges shall be applicable. This check not only gives a credit score but also provides/verifies a lot of details like identity and address details. This check helps to confirm payment history, liabilities, a bankruptcy on the candidate.

Drug Check

- A drug test is a method of checking a person's biological samples like blood, urine, hair, sweat, breath, etc. for traces of drugs/alcohol. The drug test for the purpose of employment verification typically involves urine tests for the presence of traces of any restricted/prohibited substances. We collaborate with reputed testing laboratories and work in sync with our clients to design and maintain effective and flexible employee drug testing programs. While conducting such tests we also ensure the employee's right to privacy.
