Thomas Edison started/was starting work on the railway when he was twelve, selling newspaper and snacks. There were long periods with nothing for him to do, so he built/was building himself a little laboratory in the luggage van. He could carry out experiments there when he didn't

Affirmative We use the base form of the verb to make the present simple. I work in San Francisco. You eat too much chocolate. We get up early. They live in an old house. In the third person singular (he, she, it) we add -s to the base form. Peter plays tennis. My sister tries to change her job. Our son goes to primary school. Third person singular - spelling rules Grammar rules and exercises. Questions We use do or does to make questions in the present simple. Do you know Greg? Does he go to the same school? Negative questions normally express a surprise. Does he not work? Doesn't he work? If the wh- pronoun introducing the question (who, which) is the subject of the question, we do not use the auxiliary verb do. Who knows you? Which cars belong to you? Present simple questions Grammar rules and exercises. Negative The negative forms are made with do not (don't) or does not (doesn't).I do not (don't) know. Marion does not (doesn't) want to study. Present simple negative Grammar rules and exercises. Verb to be The verb to be has completely different forms: I am, you are, he/she/it is, we are, they are. We add not after the verb to be to make negatives. I am not, you are not, it is not. Questions are made in a simple way. We just change the word order of a statement. Am I? Are you? Is he? In spoken English, however, we normally use short forms. Verb to be Grammar rules and exercises. Our tip: English grammar books PDF All PDF exercises and grammar rules from this website. top
