

A Prayer for Human Unity

When I hear violence, crime, hate, and war
I try to keep hope, yet I question, what for?
I seek out the good. But all I can see
Are division and hatred, discord around me.

Still clinging to hope, giving up, I refuse.
I put down my phone and turn off the news.
Of wealth, fame, or power I have no want or need.
Just end the division and corporate greed.

When the aliens arrive bewildered, dejected
A devolved civilization wasn't what was expected.
Progress and achievements—do they even hold worth?
I lean to our visitor, sighing, "Welcome to Earth."

Shenanigans all around to maintain the distraction.
Now, more than ever, it's time to take action.
I know I'm not the only one who's looking for better.
With open-minded optimism let's each work together—

Spreading love and forgiveness among all humankind.
Repair and healing are urgent before falling further behind.
If you're tired of this nonsense then come walk with me
And create a better world built on human unity.
