19th East

Star in The East lodge visited Mount Hope's Official Visit with RW Lawrence S. Santos via the suit. Because of attendance, they were able to claim their Traveling Gavel! Meet the Douglas!

The 19th District Merchandise Table

Everything 19th East & West was tasteful represented on our vendor table. We had coins from SITE, Social Harmony, Howland, Mount Hope, Noquochoke and the New Bedford Library all for sale. You could also buy a coin set containing all 6 coins and a free goodie. Jay Lewis' Masonic polos were represented along with Noquochoke and Social Harmony's. Howland Lodge had white and black hats with their lodge seal on them. There was also information for every upcoming event in the district from now till the end of the year. Special shout out to Wor. Sparks, Bro. Silvia and Bro Reed and RW Simmons for all your help making this a successful event for the district!!

19th West

Abraham H. Howland Jr. Lodge had their official visit from RW Lawrence S. Santos on Tuesday October 8th. During this visit, the DDGM awarded the Senior Warden Bro. Adam Miranda with the Master Builders Award. Congratulation Brother!!

A Note from the District Deputy Grand Master's

East

As we step into the crisp autumn air and vibrant colors of fall, I find myself reflecting on all the fellowship and growth we have enjoyed over the past few months. September brought a renewing of officers and new excitement to our lodges. It has been a pleasure to travel and talk with so many brothers. We are fortunate to have many events and opportunities to improve ourselves, our lodges, and our communities.

Our lodges are not merely a physical space; it is a living entity fueled by the spirit of brotherhood and a dedication to the values that define Freemasonry. We all have a part.

Take time to reflect on your own masonic journey. Think about the lessons learned and the teaching of every symbol. Continue to build stronger bonds and shape the future of our craft. We are

Freemasonry in action. Let us all do our part to shape our fraternity for many generations to come. It takes our many hands to make light work, Fraternally,

*RW Joshua David Bumpus

West

Brethren,

As we enter the holiday season, I encourage each of us to reflect on our Masonic principles and the importance of caring for one another. This time of year offers a unique opportunity to demonstrate the charity, kindness, and fellowship that define us as Masons.

Let us be mindful of the well-being of our fellow brothers and the wider community. Whether through small acts of kindness or organized efforts to support those in need, our actions can have a lasting impact.

I wish you all a season of peace, joy, and brotherhood.

*Fraternally,
RW Lawrence S. Santos Jr.

Questions

My most beloved mentor sent me a deep and profound question today. In terms of reality everything is inherently good or evil, but is this a manmade concept created to shield us from the idea that good and evil could emanate from the same place? Do we divide good and evil just for our own sanity? The real question to me is what is good and evil? There are things that are considered morally wrong and morally right to the majority of common society, but what creates morality? You could say God creates common morality, and I agree with this statement. But God seems to have his laws and actions that are deemed holy or lead to sin. The real question is how do we fill in the middle, and what creates the middle?

For almost all human existence good and evil has been perceived through millions of different eyes, and hundreds of different cultures. Each and every single one of them having their own abject definition of good and evil. As we know one culture may find polygamy or adultery socially acceptable, but another will punish it under the harshest penalties. But where is the middle? The middle is what we will call "The grey". If we look at good and evil from a purely human perspective, we see that it's defined in its totality by the reason and beliefs of whoever is in the thought exchange. Every man will have his scales of judgment balanced a little biased. We come to the theory of the grey. There is no good or evil, at least not inherently. Good and evil only exist inside the human intellect. Every single action or reaction committed unto mankind or by mankind is committed in the grey, but the perception of the victim, bystanders, or aggressor deem it good or evil. Through the eyes of the aggressor, he could be committing this act for a just and noble reason. But in the eyes of the victim, he is being slain for a petty gambling debt and finds this violence against him purely evil as the reaction does not meet the initial action. The bystander may find it either way, saying the victim should have never gambled his coin away then proceeded to do so on credit. Siding with the aggressor. There are an absolute infinite number of definitions or scenarios of good or evil within this and there is no correct answer. We as humans are inherently grey, and it is our outside influences that communicate a sense of good or evil within us. I believe we are not born with an inherent moral compass or sense of such. We are born into enigma, the grey. We know only the action, but not the sense of it. We create good and evil, the ideas of such are molded like clay inside our minds with every action in our lifetime adding a clump more. Those actions in your life could be God, love, death or the millions of other scenarios. But one thing is for certain, we are born a grey and blank slate, void of all color and opinion, with no sense of good or evil. We are born with just the grey.

Sincerely & fraternally,

Henry W. Davis

Q.=Question / I.=Ian / J.=Jesse

Q. Was this a planned trip to Mount Hollis Lodge?

I. NOPE! I was on vacation, and I wanted to do some traveling. So, I pulled up Massmasons.org and randomly picked a lodge. Then called Jesse and asked him to go.

Q. How were you two greeted by the brethren present?

I. We were greeted with open arms and hospitality. We were offered dinner, which we graciously accepted.

J. Everyone was so nice and friendly towards us.

Q. You choose a busy night to visit, was that planned?

I. No, I thought it was a regulars business meeting. In fact, I was going to travel to Provincetown MA instead but decided not to because of the distance. This would have been more than twice the ride plus it was a first degree.

J. Nice job Ian! You would pick a long, busy night more than an hour away. Lol

I. Whatever, they were great brothers, and I had fun.

J. So did I.

Q. Were there any other visitors to Mount Hollis Lodge that night?

I. Yes. There were a few brothers from Montgomery Lodge. I imagine that was because Mount Hollis was doing courtesy degree work for Montgomery lodge.

Q. What was for dinner that night?

I. Meatloaf and au gratins potatoes.

Q. Would you return?

I. Absolutely!

J. Yes! We had a good night.

Special Thanks to Right Worshipful Bryan Simons and all the brothers at Ezekiel Bates Lodge!

*We got a chance to catch up with RW Simons after the event and ask him a few questions on his flagship event.

1. Who came up with the idea of Masonic Con (MC) & when was the first event?

The Masonic Con idea stemmed from multiple organizations reaching out to present themselves at our regular meetings. We decided to host them all together at one event, which was the foundation of Masonic Con in 2016.

2. How many MC has Ezekiel Bates hosted?

Since 2016, we have hosted six Masonic Cons in Attleboro and one in New Hampshire.

3. What has worked well, what hasn't worked?

For me, Masonic Con is about the relationships created at the events. There is an esoteric aspect to the birth of friendships when it occurs around people learning together. It creates a bond that is cemented over a good dinner.

4. What were your thoughts on this year's MC?

This year the attendance was down a bit. I think being in the installation season was the main factor. Being an event that nationally draws people, we also conflicted with the Illinois Grand Annual. This caused a couple of favorite vendors to not be able to attend.

5. What speakers and vendors were you most happy about this year?

I'm always happy with our sponsors. We have many that have been with us since the beginning like Michelle Snyder and Ryan Flynn. I hope they do well at the event. They give up a day to be with us, so I always worry that the event doesn't meet their expectations. Speaker wise, I'm never disappointed. The speakers always excel by doing incredible research and exploration to deliver incredible programs to the audience.

6. When will you plan to do the next event?

I'm not sure about the next Masonic Con. If we do it again, it will likely be in a couple of years.

7. You're the chairman on 250th committee. Tell us about the next event.

The 250th Committee is actively working towards the cannon fundraising and preparing for the 250th of Lexington and Concord which you can find more information about here: <https://www.facebook.com/share/2Y2EKiyiZRmBsA8T/?mibextid=9l3rBW>
