Joanne de Simone was an author, dramatist, and film historian. Two of her seven plays, The Suicide Angel, and Earthmen, are in film pre-production, and several one-acts have been produced in NYC theatre festivals. Joanne's, Judy's Dead, took first prize in the Writer's Digest 79th Annual Stage Play Competition. Ms. de Simone's full-length play, Olivia's Roses, debuted at NYC's Thespis Theater Festival in September 2015. Her film review column appeared in the Fire Island News from 1998-2003 and returned for the 2015 season. Joanne's work has been published in various magazines, publications, and film journals. She wrote a children's book, The Metro Cats: Life in the Core of the Big Apple, and a young adult book, The Peculiar Plight of Milicent Wryght, both urban tales set in Manhattan. She was a member of the Dramatists Guild, the English Speaking Union, the Shakespeare Guild, the Episcopal Actors Guild, the Drama League, a board member of the Veronica Moscoso Foundation, and served as a judge for the Hudson River Classics Showcase Theater Playwriting Contest. Joanne passed away in May 2022.
