Rose is ten years old—almost eleven—when she spends another summer at her grandparents' lakeshore cabin. Along with their cherished dog, Goose, Rose spends time with her cousin, Jimmy, and reconnects with her lake friend, Trudy. They go swimming, huckleberry picking, and enjoy time together. This year, a special surprise is in store for the girls—their families have arranged for Rose and Trudy to attend their first summer camp. At Camp Rainbow, every day will be filled with fun, challenges, activities, and adventures with new friends.

D.D. Glover has lived most of her life in the Pacific Northwest. She has a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Washington. D.D. currently lives with her musician husband among ancient apple trees on a lake in Idaho—the same property where she spent summers with her grandparents as a child. Her three grown sons and their families visit and enjoy the multi-generation tradition. D.D.'s other children's books are, "Strawberry Rose", book one in this series, "Apple Pie Time", and "Oh no! Where did Monkey go?" She enjoys spending time with family and friends, knitting, sewing, gardening, dancing, and hiking.
