To Whom it May Concern:

Chelsea Mihaylo Hum has been my adopted Granddaughter for 20 years. I was fortunate to have met her family when I was tutoring her mother in an accent reduction program.

Chelsea is the oldest of three children in her family. She has a sister 4 years younger, & a brother, 9 years younger. From the first time I met Chelsea, she impressed me; when she answered her home phone, she would say, "Mihaylo residence, Chelsea speaking. And she was always good to look out for her sister and brother.

Her family is very close-knit. They really care about each other. Even though Chelsea lives 2 states away from her mother & brother, she always knows what's happening to them and reached out to help them. When her brother needed some direction in High School, she & her husband took it upon themselves to let him come live with them. She also lets her father come & stay, when his caregiver takes breaks.

Yes, I've watched Chelsea grow up into a beautiful, intelligent, caring woman. She has always been good with children. As she worked to teach children to swim, I could see that they loved her because she cared so much for them.

And for over 6 years now Chelsea has been a mother to Echo & a wife to Matt. She has done a great job raising Echo, and tries to put Echo's needs first, even though she is a working, outside the home, mother.

I do believe Chelsea would be a wonderful mother to children that need a caring home. She loves to see children happy & well cared for.

Sincerely,
Nancy Lockner

To Whom it may concern,

I have known Chelsea for about 20 years. From the first day we met, and every day since, she has always been one of the most positive, determined and kind people that I know.

Her biggest gift is her Heart. She pours it into every single thing she does. She is constantly striving to improve the lives of the ones she loves. The happiest I've ever seen Chelsea is whenever she is helping others, and her compassion is contagious.

Chelsea and Matt have already raised a very intelligent, empowered and empathetic daughter. I know that any child who has a chance to be parented by these two will grow up so loved, well-cared for and ready for the world out there.

Sincerely,

Sydney Thomas
