Treasure Island is one of the city's mega projects, with the potential to bring thousands of housing units and jobs. It is often cited along with the Hunters Point Shipyard

South Korea – The New Look

Park Merced and the Schlage Lock project is one of the city's developments with the potential to transform a neighborhood. But the Treasure Island project has been mired in lawsuits — until now. After the CA state Supreme Court finally punted Wednesday on a major lawsuit brought against the Treasure Island redevelopment by a group called Citizens for a Sustainable Treasure Island, led by former Supervisor Aaron Peskin. The lawsuit tried to take down the $1.5 billion commercial and residential development on the grounds that developers and city skimmed on adequate environmental reviews. Lower courts rejected that claim earlier, and the legal fight is now quashed (though Peskin told me that opponents are exploring what federal claims they have under the National Environmental Protection Act). Why the standstill? Law suits iced the project.

Emmett Smith

3/1930 – 2/2015

Emmett entered the Marymont Military Academy in Tacoma, WA prior to starting his high school years at Irene Reed High School. While in High school he loved to play football, basketball and run track, He was an excellent athlete. At the age 18 he enlisted in the Navy and became a Seabee, which he thoroughly enjoyed. In the Navy he participated in football, basketball,, track and boxing all of which helped meet his many lifelong friends. After the Navy he attended University of Washington, married Kessie (Rosemary Ann) and joined the Washington State Patrol. After a injury and unable to work he became a Safety Inspector. He retired as the Director of Safety and education Division for the Department of Labor & Industries. In retirement he enjoyed many of our Seabee reunions and travel. He is survived by a large family. Kissie had passed away on Jan 8, 2012 (Thank you Norman Eveleth for sending us this information)
