Top stories of the week

➤ The Suez Canal Economic Zone (SCZONE) is advancing its green fuel initiatives, having signed an agreement with Itochu Corporation and Orascom Construction during a forum in Tokyo. This partnership aims to establish facilities for ammonia ship bunkering at the Sokhna and East Port Said ports. Discussions were also held with Sumitomo Corporation regarding potential cooperation in green methanol bunkering and hydrogen production. Itochu is actively expanding its green ammonia operations, planning a pilot in Singapore for 2027, and views the Suez Canal's strategic ports as a potentially critical hub for its future global bunkering network. (Ship&Bunker, August 21, 2025)

➤ Oil prices increased as traders reacted to the largest drop in U.S. stockpiles in four months, which fell by 6 million barrels, pushing Brent and West Texas Intermediate benchmarks up by nearly $1. This tightening of domestic supply challenges broader market expectations of a future oversupply. However, a simultaneous inventory buildup at the Cushing, Oklahoma hub created uncertainty about the true state of U.S. demand. Geopolitical tensions escalated as Russia-Ukraine peace talks stalled, with new attacks and the arrest of a Ukrainian national suspected in the 2022 Nord Stream pipeline sabotage, further impacting market stability.
