Each year, the ExxonMobil Foundation Community Summer Jobs Program (CSJP) offers eligible college undergraduates paid summer internships by providing financial grants to nonprofit agencies that allow them to hire college students. These students receive valuable work experience and an opportunity to make a significant impact in the community. In addition to their work at respective organizations, interns complete a group community service project and participate in professional development training.

Note: Family members of the board, staff, or retirees of ExxonMobil, Sunwest Communications, and The Health Museum are not eligible to participate in the ExxonMobil Foundation CSJP internship program.
