Spiritual Courage

Confronting evil within and in the world

A week-long retreat
with Renee Whatley

July 30th - August 4th

“When you give to God, you need to be active, to overcome inertia, to move and do and act, to risk and sometimes to fight against your own and other’s evil.” PGL #244

Led by:

Renee Whatley, Ph.D., Senior Pathwork Helper and Licensed Psychologist.

Location:

Pendle Hill, a Quaker Retreat Center in Philadelphia, PA near the airport and train station; Explore 23 acres of beautiful woodland trails and consciously prepared meals using local and organic ingredients.

Evil is not anyone’s favorite topic. We all instinctively want to turn away from it. Deny it. Minimize it.

Clearly, we are in a time in which that defense of withdrawal will not serve us individually or collectively. Spirit is asking us to face evil squarely, within ourselves, in others and in the world.

As the Pathwork Guide states in PGL #244, “You cannot deal with an enemy whose existence you ignore and whose weapons you cannot recognize.”

Recognizing evil within us and among us is a prerequisite to fully embodying the spiritual courage to confront it cleanly and directly.

Join us this summer to create a safe container to explore both the question of evil and its counter-force, spiritual courage. Together, we will:

- Identify and work through our collective resistance to facing evil
- Identify the forces of evil and how they live in us/world
- Enter the pathway to the spiritual courage required to confront evil within, within our communities and in the world
- Gather the willingness to step into our dual task: personal transformation/purification AND using our talents in service to God’s plan.

This retreat is designed to help you tap into the power and wisdom to sustain yourself during these dark times, maintain a vision of God’s heaven on earth and an embodied felt sense of your role/engagement in that creation.
