BIOGRAPHY

Will "Roc" Griffin is a pianist, keyboardist and music producer who specializes in Blues, Pop, Rock, R&B, Funk, Hip-hop and Jazz. He has performed with and produced notable musicians for decades.

One of Will's first major accomplishments as a keyboardist was performing with Dr. Dre and the World Class Wrecking Cru on various recordings in the late 1980's. Will later went on to produce and perform keyboards on a certified-gold recording from the 1993 movie, "Judgment Night". The movie's title track featured rock band, Faith

No More collaborating with hip-hop giants, Boo Yaa Tribe.

His next big project involved jazz piano legend, Herbie Hancock. Will co-produced Hancock's album, "Dis Is Da Drum", which was nominated for a Grammy in 1996.

He also toured nationally and internationally with Hancock as a keyboardist and programmer in support of the record.

More recently Will produced and played keyboards with blues giant, John Lee Hooker Jr. Out of the three projects musically directed and produced by Will for Hooker, two were nominated for a Grammy, in 2005 and 2006.

Will Roc is currently performing with his band, Will Roc Project at various venues, delighting listeners with his powerfully, unique sound. Will Roc Project is a band comprised of hand picked, professional musicians who possess just as impressive credentials as Will Roc. The band is able to adjust its personnel to accommodate any specifications desired by the buyer.

Will Roc is the musical composer for an upcoming film release and, in the final stages of writing a pilot for a television series, which incorporates his original music.
