Thank you for your interest in sponsoring the 2026 Pollinator Relatives Workshop!

Our Tribal Advisory Group (TAG) and Planning Team are both at work preparing the upcoming event and we look forward to highlighting your organization to our prospective Delegates from Tribal Nations & Indigenous Peoples (TIP).

Workshop Values

Purpose

This event is an opportunity for TIP Delegates to network, collaborate, learn, and share resources and research about Pollinator Relatives in a culturally-appropriate, safe space.

Through the integration of Indigenous and Western knowledges, TIP Delegates will develop an action plan to support their own Pollinator Relatives upon return to their community.

Pollinator Relatives

Pollinator Relatives include bees, birds, bats, butterflies, beetles, other insects, and small mammals - all vital species TIP share kinship with since time immemorial. This event honors and supports these unique socio-cultural and ecological relationships.

TIP Delegates

This event supports, benefits, and encourages the important Pollinator conservation work being done by TIP. Applicants will be admitted in small group Delegations of 2-4 individuals per TIP entity, building a cohort of trust and fostering growth of TIP capacity.

When: Mon, 6/15/26 (arrive) - Fri, 6/19/26 (depart)
Timeline: Tues-Weds-Thurs (3 full days) & Fri (half day)
Venue & Lodging: Airway Heights, WA
Fieldtime: ~3 field visit sites
Field Sites: Spokane Region
Total Participants: 35-45

Workshop Overview

THE FACTS

<https://thepnwlf.org/>

5

“67% (sixty-seven percent) of nonprofit leaders whose organizations primarily serve Native American communities report that no foundations provided new funding to support these communities in 2020.”

The Center For Effective Philanthropy (2021)

“Less than 1% (one percent) of philanthropic dollars explicitly benefits Native Americans, and Native-led organizations receive roughly only half of that funding.”

The Bridgespan Group (2025)

“[T]here are more than 70 (seventy) species of pollinators currently listed as endangered or threatened.”

U.S. Fish & Wildlife Services (2020)

“Indigenous approaches have curbed deforestation, increased fish biomass, safeguarded vulnerable species, and reduced wildfire risks - results that meet or exceed mainstream conservation targets. [...S]upporting Indigenous self-determination and rights is both an ethical imperative and a practical necessity for addressing the planet’s ecological crises.”

Harvard Project on Indigenous Governance and Development (2025)

“The L.I.G.H.T. Foundation is developing research partnerships to support native pollinator species threatened by climate change while also supporting Indigenous-led conservation practices, Tribal sovereignty, and Tribal rights.”
