Jeff Cohen

Jeff Cohen has been on a famous appraisal television show for eight years as well as a consultant for major auction houses. In addition, he has authored several books on fine watches, estate jewelry and antiques. He is the owner of the prestigious estate company Green & Sons in Chicago and travels extensively providing knowledge to collectors and dealers.

Todd McGohan

Todd McGohan is an internationally known expert in rare watches and estate jewelry. As the owner of The Guildmark Group, one of the oldest estate buying firms in the US, Todd has acquired 30 years of experience working with fine jewelry stores across the country. Additionally, he is a partner with one of the largest auction companies in the United States.

Stuart Palestrant

Stuart Palestrant is a GIA Graduate Gemologist and Certified Gemologist Appraiser. His career in the jewelry business has spanned four decades and has included experience as President of the Arizona Guild and Ohio Guild of the American Gem Society. Additionally, he was the owner of Wendel's Diamond Jewelers, a proud member of the AGS, for 30 years.

Auction houses typically charge a 25% buyers premium and a 10% sellers fee. This 35% profit to the auction house makes it so we can put more money in your hands than they will for fine jewelry, rare watches, diamonds and fine colored gemstones.
