Education and Training Services

Most countries and health facilities currently are challenged by shortages of health workers. In addition, health workers often do not have the competencies, knowledge, attitudes, and practices they need to deliver quality care. Corvus Health works with our clients to determine their education and training needs and deliver results cost-effectively.

Education and Training Principles

- Competency-based
- Practical
- Cost-effective
- Team-based
- Interdisciplinary
- Fit for Purpose

Corvus Health provides a wide variety of education and training to improve health workers' performance and health facilities' bottom line:

Pre-Service Education: Corvus Health can train frontline workers such as ultrasound techs and laboratory techs, medical secretaries, coders, and billers, on-site or in external facilities.

Post-Graduate Training: Corvus Health can provide post-graduate training for many professions, including nurses (e.g.: endoscopy nursing certification). We can also upgrade physicians' skills, for example, training them in new surgical procedures or in the placement of new devices. Depending on the type of training required, the training can take place in your facility or another location. We can arrange for overseas training for courses not available in-country. Corvus Health can also establish and run fellowship programs.

In-Service Training: The field of medicine advances rapidly and health workers frequently need updates in order to provide a wide range of services at a high level of quality. Corvus Health offers face-to-face, eLearning, or blended learning on a wide variety of subjects including a broad range of clinical care topics, quality improvement, leadership and management, customer service, and soft skills. Courses can be custom designed to meet your organization's needs. Corvus' approach usually begins with an evaluation of learners' needs and includes the development of plans to implement and evaluate the learning.

Continuous Professional Development: Corvus Health offers Continuous Professional Development training, approved by the relevant regulatory authority, to enable your clinicians to maintain their licenses.

Online and Distance Learning: Depending on the topic, many types of training can be offered online, via mobile phone (Interactive Voice Response/IVR, most appropriate for isolated, low-literacy health workers), DVD, tablet, and paper.

Mentoring: Staff in whom you would like to make a long term investment can be paired up with one of our mentors. Weekly phone calls from the mentor help the mentee problem solve, implement new learnings, network, and develop the confidence they need to rise to the next level of their career.
