

Psychology & lack of it within the Norwegian Judicial System

- Regarding child distribution cases only, and not criminal acts
- Why psychologists within can not use their profession properly

Illustration: Stupidity of the past

The Norwegian court system is set up like this. You can ask for an 'expert' psychologist to assist the judge in situations that can seem more difficult to judge than others. This so-called 'expert' is not an expert at all. If you are a person of genuine interest for the people and a good psychologist, it is guaranteed that you do not want to touch a single case within the court system. Those who know what they are talking about keep it to their own clinic or privately owned firms, to guide people at their best possible opportunities. The government, and the communes / municipalities have so many restrictions on how to operate and how to behave on behalf of others. It's called hierarchy within a state system that you need to follow. We are talking about a state system who does not care for you. It does not care for you because the 'rules' on how to do your job are only written for them to use to save money for the government. It is quite easy. It is all about economics and there is no love within a system.

An example: If you have an issue about your child/children's situation you can take it to court. It is highly recommended that you use every so-called 'case preparation meeting' (which is 3-4) because it will strengthen your case in front of a judge as a result of wanting to collaborate with the government regarding a child/children. And of course this is the best for the child, as they say. Complete BS. All of these meetings take at least a year and the child will grow a lot within that timespan. This option or 'rule', was implemented in the 80s(?), solely to save money for the state/government. This is a complete fact, since the father of a certain person had a colleague who actually implemented it. So, do not trust a Norwegian judge and their words coming out of their c mouth as lies.

Question: If it takes roughly nine months to put up a case regarding a child who surely can have a better situation, and the court calls this a prioritization, does this mean that they are understaffed as a result of low budgets, or is it simply that Norway (the system itself) destroy children and future generations? (do not forget corrupt 'experts')

So, by this meaning if you as a psychologist work for the government most of your focus will be on how to do your job on behalf of how the system wants you to do your job. The system can be seen as basically sentences written.

Thereof the Norwegian slogan 'We destroy children'. Because nine months is actually a prioritization here. F joke, when it comes to both administration of budgets, and people who think they are doing a good job because the system prefers it to be done in that specific way. And this specific way is all about the Norwegian state wallet.

The 'expert' psychologist Per Kaald, who has lately been indicted to give a financial compensation to a gentleman of $35K and delete his declarations regarding this person. In that specific court case he tried to make a point about how sick he was and was also the 'expert' who placed a child along with child abusers (mental and physical, possibly also sexual). He is guaranteed either corrupt or highly incompetent. There are until now two judges at Telemark District Court who support his declarations. The evidence is clear, but his position in the system as a form of power position makes him right. In child distribution cases is where it is the easiest way to be corrupt. I reckon all of you understand this, because it is about your own child/children and love for your offspring. Easy to recognize.

Anyways, if you follow this link <https://www.psykologforeningen.no/lonn-og-arbeid/jus-og-arbeidsliv/sakkyndig> you will see the public list of whomever can be used as an expert by the Norwegian court system. And he is still on the list. Doesn't that make you wonder about how the judicial system in a country basically is malfunctional?

So, this man called Per Kaald is now as far as iacte Ltd. knows corrupt, incompetent and sick. Still used by the Norwegian government. The district court of Telemark is aware of it, but does nothing about it. Underdeveloped.

Every other nation on this planet, be aware. This is what will destroy and ruin your homeland in the future. Norwegian government officials are aware, can not do anything about it because of a strong democratic system.

Implement psychology in your referee education, and do yourself a favour. Humans in general are mentally sick
