

Patriotism & globalization

If you are a leader or a peasant, you will most likely understand:

An example: The patriotism within you relates to the system. If the system fails on your behalf and your circuit does not understand it, it is not their fault, because of lack of experience. Once the experience is there, you will groove.

By this example: Patriotism is indoctrination and rulership. Because you are a social being.

Let's say you are not being appreciated by the state in a matter which does not suit you, your family or your friends. You will start to lose the high valued mindset towards your own government. You will feel betrayed. This is not learning but a classical example of how the human mind operates. If the government treats you in a bad way, you will consider moving to another place. It is all natural. Your genes will always remember that you were once a nomad. Your cells remember and your government will not. There is no love within the system. If you are a state employee you need to follow the rules or regulations, not the person's needs or mistreatment. Resulting in corruption. It results in corruption because you are indoctrinated into a system where money might give you more value than friendship or personal needs. You are lower paid, and your ego might give an opportunity to be corrupt.

Questions:

- Do you like politics in this timeline as you did when you were younger?
- Why does your leader create a situation so bad for you and your family?
- Why do you consider your life as difficult, mentally or physically?

We are getting more aware of infrastructure, politics and wrong judgment by people in power. This is something we are used to, but as you get older you are getting aware of it. Being aware of it means that you can make a difference.

The people you love will always be there for you, the system will not. Your system is driven and held together by words on a paper. It is called laws, and regulations and legislations also. This is the result of globalization. Basically.

An example: If you are a veteran not aware of the dangers you are being put through by your government, you are most likely to be proud of the heroic act. It is heroic solely to feed our own government with growth, and your people. In your thoughts you are a hero, but in real life the government will not care about how you are today. This is systemic and how we relate to the different systems we have on Earth. A result of indoctrination. It's fiction.

A question: Do you feel good when you kill? Or do you feel good doing it for others and for fame? Satisfaction? If no people would like to engage in war, would we have it? Are you being forced? Do you love your leader?

We need the system to behave properly. But a leader who basically just wants power, is set to be destroyed. This document is exactly how bad the piece of shits document the global leadership produces. It could have been better.

So, if you are getting mad or something like that reading this, remember; we all have to accept criticism at work.
