

Protons, neutrons and its building functionality for consciousness

What is a proton? And why do we have it?

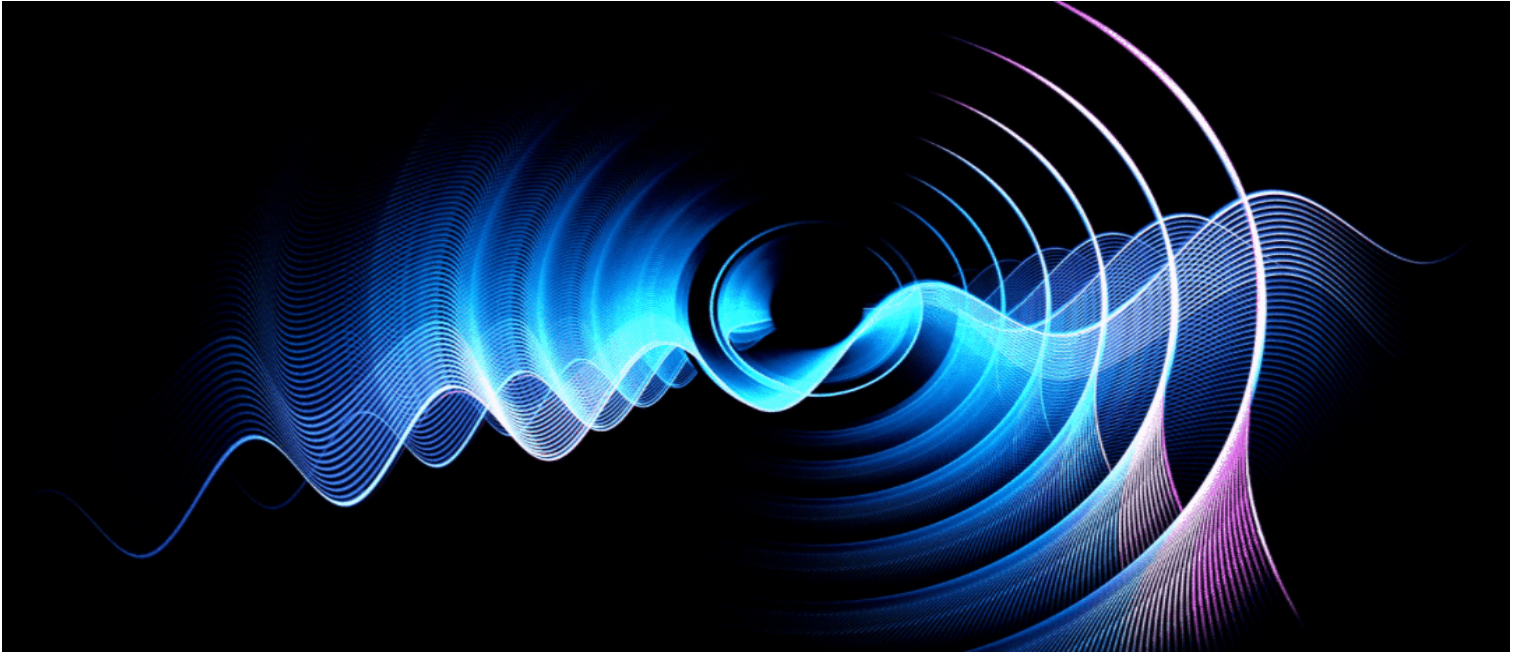

Illustration: positive amplitude and the resonating electrons build protons and neutrons, negative amplitude on the sine is electrons resonating resulting in matter.

One proton seems to exist solely of $\sqrt{12}$ electrons as a positive. A neutron seems to exist solely of $\sqrt{7}$ electrons as a positive. These electrons can be seen as positive because of quantum gravity and its oscillation triggered purpose. They will solely resonate with the oscillating sine on the + side amplitude. Regular electrons resonate with + and -, resulting in a negative. The negative will create holographic matter.

= Mathematically spoken

The main reason for holographic matter existence seems to be far side driven. The far side is your purpose driven soul related positive effect on the expansion of our universe. This is development for the greater good, and life itself.

An example: observations have a tendency to give not wanted/expected/understandable results. If there is a greater part also observing your experiment, the path and learning process for you as part of the matter world has begun. We can refer to the other non-observable side as the course matter world. It is noticing us, noticing it. What serves(?).

The mirror-graphic theory is involved here. And there will come a document about this subject later, when time sets it suitable. It is about your purpose in life, and how to relate to what you are experiencing as a human being.

Holographic matter:

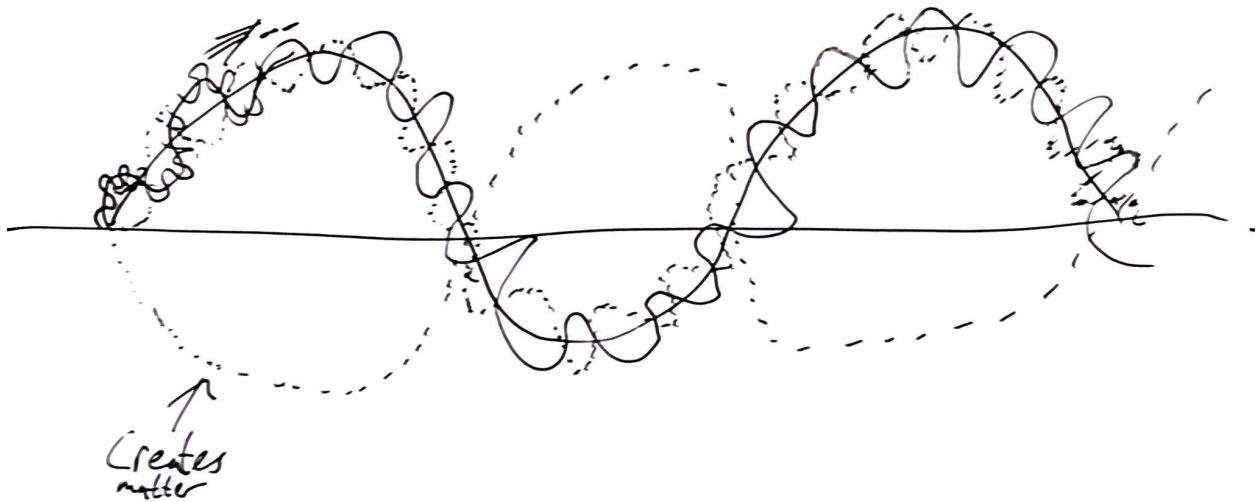

Illustration: The negative amplitude resonating part of the sinus / oscillation creates what you can experience with your perception.

