

❄️🌨️⚠️ New: First Widespread Snow Event/Snow Warning For Sunday Into Early Monday & Mid To Late November ⚠️🌨️❄️. . .

Initially, rain and wind and more unsettled conditions will begin to encroach across our shores from this weekend and throughout Sunday and also, whilst importantly coinciding with the expected and current much colder and developing cold conditions in place across our shores at present.

However, on this occasion, and in the northern half of the country and some parts of Wales will be seeing and experiencing their first widespread snow event of the season and for this November during Sunday afternoon/evening and into early Monday as any precipitation in this period is likely to turn to snow and even to some much 'lower levels' in many of these parts.

Also potentially but to a lesser extent in parts as far south as central England/Midlands across at least higher routes and with some potentially wintry weather or even sleet to some certain parts of the far south on present and real indicators.
Additionally, some further snow opportunities will then arise during early Tuesday across the north and then for later in the period and during late November and around our further expected dates and further enhanced details will follow on this in the weekly update and breakdown shortly.

To conclude, others may not pick up on this or even issue any snow warnings from SUNDAY until the last minute and, if at all, based on experience . . .

Happy cold Friday everyone and the mid to late November snow and cold are more than ready to 'start' delivering on our part (see below proof of forecast),
