

Student Critiques of The Real Estate Instructor at Troublesome Creek Realty

"The best part is when you talk about taking control of the classroom at the beginning of class. ... Working from back to front.... The different ways to garner and keep the students attention throughout the class..hearing that it is hard to keep adults on task...whether it be timeliness to/from class or disrupting others...you would think that adults should know that everyone's time is important...so it was interesting reading thru all the things that go into preparing for your classes."

Algona

"I am often asked by realtors and the public about the size of an acre..when I recite 43,560 sq ft—I think of your photo of you at 43 and the Farmall 560!"

"I don't teach real estate classes but I do teach classes at my church and sometimes at work...Having attended several of your classes I knew I would pick up some great tips....addresses the many things that can go wrong and how to avoid them..the real life examples of challenges you have faced in the classroom and how you altered your teaching technique...would like to know how the younger generation (with all of their technical saviness) react to your classes...I'm guessing they learn a lot and learn well without all the bells and whistles—power points especially"

Robins

"I like that a lot of the topics have: "there is no wrong answer!. there is so much practical advise on teaching skills....

Waukon

Stronger aspects of this program: "stories"; the weaker aspects of this program include: "formatting & typos"