Just in case BT Naturals has not already received enough great stories regarding your healing oils and use on horses, I want to tell you another one but first I need to give some background on my horse.

Sierra, my Palomino Quarter horse gelding, was vaccine injured back in the year 2000... anaphylactic shock, seizure, hives and muscle weakness. He recovered, or so I thought (never to be vaccinated again).

Over the years, I noticed he became somewhat afraid of going downhill. I acknowledged his concerns and got off at those moments. Looking back, I now know he no longer felt as strong in his hindquarters as he once did.

In 2007, he had a serious fall in the pasture. Again, it appeared to be due to a weakening in his hindquarters. He recovered, or so I thought.

As the years progressed, he continued to show signs of additional deterioration. In 2011, he showed symptoms of metabolic syndrome that could easily have progressed to Cushings disease. He rapidly gained about 200 lbs and had fever in his feet. As a trainer of natural horsemanship, I typically turn to natural remedies for health issues. With the help of an all natural immune system balancer product, I got the weight off him and was nicely managing his health. He was on the road to recovery, or so I thought.

Unfortunately, in 2014 as muscle atrophy continued to plague him, he lost his balance and suffered another fall. This time I was very close to euthanasia. I didn't think he could make it through anything else. The vet suspected muscle was ripped off of bone along with spinal nerve damage. His body was bent in a crescent shape and he walked sideways when attempting to walk forward. He used the walls to help support his back end when just standing around or when eating. I'm certain most people would have put him down at this point and I certainly would do that too if there was no quality of life, but I could tell Sierra was NOT ready to give up. He wanted to fight so I promised him I would do everything possible to support him in that fight.

In 2014, he lost his balance and suffered another fall. This time I was close to euthanasia. I didn't think he could make it through another fall or worse.

Sierra trotted out fast from the barn for approximately 150 feet, jumped through the gate opening, picked up a canter and went straight down the middle of the pasture!

In early September, I heard about Halo's Healing Oil and spoke with Sue about the product. We concluded that it may be just the thing to help Sierra make additional progress. It was certainly worth trying.

As of this writing, Sierra has been on Halo's Healing Oil for 6 weeks. At 5 weeks, a quantum leap of change occurred. I opened the pasture gate as normal. Sierra trotted out fast from the barn for approximately 150 feet, jumped through the gate opening, picked up a canter and went straight down the middle of the pasture! Talk about a jaw dropping moment! Every single day, as dry weather has permitted, he has been equally as exuberant to go out. He has not hugged a wall or a fence line since being on Halo's Healing Oil.

Our natural hoof care practitioner was also extremely impressed with Sierra's changes. For the first time in over a year, he was standing close to square (how a normal horse should stand) and she was able to trim his hind feet with them slightly picked up off the ground, like it should be.

A combination of several modalities have helped Sierra progress over the past year, but the jaw dropping "wow factor" was thanks to Halo's Healing Oil.
