

Morgan Lyon Cotti, PhD

Associate Director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah

Morgan Lyon Cotti is the associate director of the Hinckley Institute of Politics at the University of Utah where she also manages the local and legislative internship programs, contributes to the political analysis, and teaches courses on state and national politics. Prior to her time at the Hinckley Institute, Morgan worked as the research director at Utah Foundation, a policy analyst at the Governor's Office of Management and Budget, and a research analyst at the Office of Legislative Research and General Counsel. Morgan earned a BA in political science from the University of Utah, an MA in public policy from Brigham Young University, and a PhD in political science from George Washington University. She serves on the boards of the Utah Debate Commission, Utah Education Debate Coalition, Real Women Run, and was recently appointed to the President's Leadership Council at the U.