

Kimberlee Carlile, Director Talent Ready Utah

Building a sustainable workforce, the Utah way.

Talent Ready Utah develops industry and education partnerships to build Utah's workforce. It designs workforce solutions and training to meet industry needs and help fill high-skill, high-wage jobs. Announced by Governor Herbert in 2017, Talent Ready Utah is a collaborative partnership between the Utah Governor's Office, Governor's Office of Economic Development, Department of Workforce Services, State Board of Education, System of Higher Education, System of Technical Colleges, Salt Lake Chamber, and industry partners. Talent Ready Utah currently has pathway programs in aerospace, architecture, construction, diesel tech, engineering, medical innovations, and technology industries. Talent Ready Utah also oversees Utah's Talent Ready Apprenticeship Connection, which is a unique Utah model to implement youth apprenticeships among high school students. Utah Works is another program that provides short-term training for employers across the state. Learn more at talentreadyutah.com.

Kimberlee Carlile is director of industry and talent initiatives for the Governor's Office of Economic Development. Carlile serves as the state lead on Talent Ready Utah, Gov. Gary Herbert's initiative to increase industry and educational partnerships. She oversees pathway programs in four different Utah industries: aerospace manufacturing, diesel technology, medical innovation and technology. Carlile's experience in education communications has helped move the state's workforce development initiatives into the spotlight.
