DIRECTOR'S NOTE

In 1967, Sir Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice wrote a pop cantata for a school in England. With the help of Andrew Lloyd Webber's father, the length of the show was extended and performed a second time. Each time it was performed, more music was added until 1974, when Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat became the full-length musical, you will be experiencing today.

My first experience with Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat began in the late 90's when I was cast to play one of the brothers in my hometown of Sacramento, Ca. In early 2000's, I performed the show again, as the role of Joseph. Four years ago, with the help of my talented wife Lori, whom had previously choreographed the show, we pieced together our favorite parts from our past performances, as well as what we had seen as audience members to bring Mankato our version of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. The response we received from the audience, the sold-out performances, and positive reviews, I knew this was a show we had to bring back to perform on the Mankato Playhouse Stage.

Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat is by far one of my favorite shows to direct. Not only do I have the opportunity to sing the songs for cast members when they have a rehearsal conflict, but the way the show is brilliantly written, it gives directors a blank canvas to use their creative minds to bring their vision of the show to life. With the help of my all-star production team, and our talented cast, I hope you enjoy Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat as much as we have enjoyed putting it together.

David Holmes
Director
