

PARISH NEWS

"Truly I tell you, just as you did it to one of the least of these who are members of my family, you did it to me."

Matthew 25:40, NRSV

Friends in Christ,

The year is half over, and what a decade it's been so far. January seems like it's a world away, with the devastating Australian wildfires and deadly escalation of international tensions between the US and Iran seem almost like ancient history, now. Every week, we see the tension rise; around the world, we see more protests, even as we see more BIPOC people being unjustly denied the same rights as their white counterparts. These children of God, made in God's image, being denied basic dignity and respect, often being murdered without any hope of justice for their families and communities. It's almost enough to push out of our minds the deadly virus still plaguing our world— almost, but not quite enough. 120,000 human lives are not so easily ignored, or forgotten, and that number only promises to climb.

Pastor's Bookcase

The Broken Kingdoms

by N. K. Jemisin

What we're left with is a lot of anxiety and a lot of uncertainty. We don't know what's going to happen next, but as the people of God, we have hope that it gets better. That the promise of the resurrection isn't something that limited to what happens after our death —the resurrection is the work of the Church today, the work of all the people of God to proclaim new life for all of creation.

We are a people united by hope, called to live out the grace of God. The question for us today is how will we do that? When so much seems out of our power, what can we do? There isn't a single satisfying answer to these important questions, but I think that a good place to start is to remember how Jesus sought out those who were most vulnerable. The naked and the hungry and the incarcerated. Outcasts and outsiders and strangers. "Just as you did it to one of the least of these who are members of my family," Jesus says, "you did it to me."

We probably can't solve all the worlds problems overnight by ourselves, but we absolutely can care of people. We can lend our voices to those whose cries have been ignored. We can stand up in solidarity with all who suffer injustice. We can care for those who seen as the least important, knowing that's precisely where we find Christ in the world.

In Peace,

Pastor Micah Sievenpiper

From the President

Less than a month ago, on May 25, an unarmed black man named George Floyd was murdered by a white police officer in Minneapolis, MN. While Floyd was handcuffed and lying face down, the officer had his knee on Floyd's neck for 8 minutes and 46 seconds, during which time Floyd begged for his life, repeatedly saying he couldn't breathe, and calling for his mother. The last 3 minutes he was motionless and without a pulse. The officer continued to use lethal force.

Floyd was taken by medics to a nearby hospital where he was pronounced dead. Witness videos of the event went viral, igniting the city.

Protests have occurred in U.S. cities and many countries throughout the world. Enough is enough, people say. End racism once and for all. Justice now! What are we to make of this? Importantly, what are we going to do about it? There is no denying we live in a racist society, that people of color, particularly black people, suffer from centuries of persecution and mistreatment. Our libraries are full of books, articles and films on the subject. The stories of pain and suffering abound in works of art, music, dance, poetry, plays and movies. It's on each of us to learn our racist history, and, to understand the how and why of it, and how it continues to harm people of color today. My answer to the first question I asked is this... the Holy Spirit is shaking the world to its core, awakening the dry bones in Ezekiel to new life that is right with God. And my answer to the second question? We are to live our faith in Jesus Christ by loving our neighbor, dismantling racism, and working toward a truly just and equitable society. Doing nothing is not an option. Inaction only perpetuates existing policies and practices that deny racial equality and justice for our brothers and sisters. We can, we must do better. God is counting on us.

COUNCIL HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of the June 16, 2020, Council Meeting

- Kathy Linder is now our Congregational Council Treasurer. Thanks to Mindy Rash for her excellent work.
 - Pastor Micah is working with John Anderson, Terry Kueker, and Jack Umbach to upgrade technology capabilities in the sanctuary.
 - A new part-time paid position of Building Superintendent was approved. This position will be combining the janitorial services formerly contracted out and the building manager position, currently held by Kevin Fewell. This will improve the quality of the cleanliness of the building, as well as streamline the physical management of our property.
 - Look for new signage outside and eventually inside our building to cordially welcome all into our midst. It will show our status as a “Reconciling Congregation in Christ” and a clear message that everyone is welcome! Thanks to the hard work of the Welcoming and Hospitality Committee and the Property Committee.

THEOLOGY ON TAP

Stay tuned...

Henrik Andersen will be providing Theology on Tap information later this month!

FEEDING 800

Due to the Coronavirus, our sack lunch packing event has been postponed. The Social Ministry Committee will reschedule the event once we get a better sense of when we will be allowed to resume in-person church activities.

In the meantime, consider gathering non-perishable food items that will be included in the sack lunches. The single-serving, packaged items we need include:

- Tuna/chicken kits
- Beef jerky sticks
- Fruit snacks (cups, strips, or gummies)
- Granola bars
- Crackers or cookies

Our goal is to include two protein non-perishable food items (marked above) in each sack lunch, in addition to a fruit, granola bar, and cracker/cookie item! We need 800 of each item listed about to meet this goal.

As you venture out to run essential errands or place your online grocery order, please consider adding at least one of the items listed above to your cart. Thanks in advance for helping us get a jump start on this important ministry!
