Tats and mats

We wanted to let you know that your dog has some tatty fur but don't worry, we are able to brush it out.

Brushing tatty fur can be uncomfortable for dogs which is why we will need a longer appointment so that we can do this safely, and with the comfort in mind.

Before we continue, we would like to make you aware of the following

Appearance (sometimes)

We may need to cut out some tatty fur with scissors or clippers if these areas are too large to brush. This may mean we cannot shape your dog's coat in the usual way. We will do our best to blend in their areas as sympathetically as we can

Brush burn (rare)

Brushing your dog's tatty fur can cause a friction burn known as brush burn. This presents as a rash and is caused by brushing the same area.

Our skill stylists will try their best to avoid this by working slower, giving their skin time to rest.

Permission to proceed

Please give us your permission to proceed by agreeing with these statements and signing below

I understand that my dog's style may be different this time and my dog may develop a minor rash.

I understand this additional service requires a longer appointment that will cost £5-£10.
