A Peek Inside

Life Burial Party is a play that revolves around the amorous lifestyle of a randy Chief, who had been brought into fame by the wife of his youth but could not keep the sanctity of his marriage.

When Chief died, Anike, Chief's widow the original owner of the wealth being flaunted by Chief inherited all her husband's possession to the shock of the other wives who thought they already had their hands in the cookie jar. After the will was read by the lawyer, she settled some of chief's other wives while she left uncatered for the one she perceived as gold diggers.
