Ensuring Election Integrity Has Never Been More Important Sen. Bob Mensch (R-24)

Americans are debating an array of contentious issues. As profound as they are, none of these debates can be truly settled without an election process the people trust.

The bad news is, most Pennsylvanians say they are dissatisfied with the way elections are conducted in the state, according to a May 2022 Franklin and Marshall poll.

The good news is, we're a step closer to giving the people the power to restore confidence in Pennsylvania's election process.

The General Assembly passed two proposed amendments to the Pennsylvania Constitution addressing elections. If approved again in the 2023-24 legislative session, the questions will be put on the ballot for voters to decide.

One of these amendments would require all voters to present a valid form of identification prior to voting. This would apply to voting in person or by mail.

Valid ID would include any government-issued identification. To ensure no voter is prevented from participating in the election process, anyone without a valid ID could receive one at no cost.

Pennsylvania is woefully behind the times when it comes to requiring voter ID. Thirty-five other states require some form of voter ID, and studies show that states where voter ID was implemented have not seen a drop-off in voter participation in any demographic.

When asked, citizens have consistently said they want voter ID. A Franklin and Marshall poll last year found that 74 percent of Pennsylvanians support requiring voters to present identification to vote.

A separate proposed amendment would require the General Assembly to provide for audits of elections, including the administration of elections and the results.

The work would be performed by the state Auditor General, who is elected independently by the voters. In years when the Auditor General is on the ballot, the election audit would be conducted by a separate, independent auditor.

Election audits would provide transparent and fact-based analysis of election results, giving voters across the political spectrum assurance that elections are fair and accurate.

In addition to moving these constitutional questions one step closer to voters, the General Assembly passed Act 88 to get private money out of the administration of our elections. The legislation was created in response to the use of grant money from the Center for Tech and Civic Life (CTCL) during the 2020 Election.

Even if you've never heard of CTCL, you've heard of one its chief financial backers: billionaire Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg. Correspondence between CTCL, the Wolf Administration and county officials demonstrates that millions of dollars in "Zuckerbucks" were directed predominantly to counties that favor Democrats.

Common sense tells us that using private funding to pay for the administration of elections is going to undermine confidence in the process, so we banned it. However, counties do face substantial costs related to primary and general elections, and we ensured the state will help them do it right.

The new law creates grants for counties to cover costs such as hiring and training staff, printing ballots and managing voting machines and tabulation equipment.

In return, counties who accept the money are required to take several critical steps to ensure the integrity of the process. They must clean up voter rolls, including removing deceased voters, and report the total number of voters registered prior to an election. They must disclose the number of mail-in votes received within four hours of polls closing and ensure safekeeping of all ballots. Finally, counties must count ballots on Election Day without interruption.

Our republic began in Pennsylvania, and we're taking the lead in keeping it healthy and strong. Act 88 and the above constitutional amendments make up one of the most significant election integrity packages enacted in America.

Passions are running high across Pennsylvania and the nation. People need to know we can resolve our differences peacefully through the election process. Such resolution can only occur when the integrity of the process is assured. We can do it, and it's my hope that soon the voters themselves will play a key role in providing it.

The Declaration

Please stay updated on the signers of the Declaration by clicking HERE.

The Election Integrity Committee met on the roof of the RAM in Perkasio to celebrate Craig Staats signing of the Declaration! Thank you Craig for sharing this moment with us!

Action Item

Please read:

It is important that we get many more of our elected officials to sign the Election Integrity Declaration.

We are asking that you send a letter to your state representative and senator. Before sending, please enter the name of your legislator at the top of the letter, then sign your name at the bottom. The Declaration should be sent as an attachment with the letter. Below is a link to enable you to locate the contact information for your state representative and senator.

Both the letter and the Declaration can be found on the last page of this newsletter.

The Kari Lake election-day only vote is reportedly 70/30 in her favor.

Do you see what a conundrum this creates for election fraudsters when people disregard mail and early vote options?

They NEED you to vote early or by mail to know how much to hold back in reserve to generate narrow election results for the chosen rulers.

If you have the option otherwise, never vote by mail, and never vote early if you'll be in town on election day.

Kari Lake and all MAGA candidates won Arizona yesterday. It was a true RED wave.

There is a lesson here—Arizonians UNITED behind their MAGA candidates. Then, they overwhelmed the polls and voted mostly in person.

Sample Letter

Greetings Rep. :

My name is . As a constituent of yours, I am writing to inquire if you have read the Election Integrity Declaration that was emailed over to you in the last week or so? I am writing to strongly encourage you to sign it. There are many legislators that have, including, Governor candidate, Senator Douglas Mastriano. America’s military and veteran families have made the ultimate sacrifice to defend and fight for our freedoms. America’s greatness depends on an election process that is free, fair and transparent. It is important for us that you realize that things are not as they used to be—where we the people remained uninvolved in crucial matters of running the country, such as in our elections. Unfortunately, we now see that our elections have become fraught with discrepancies and fraud. We have witnessed our state executives and courts inappropriately write law by way of rulings and disregard current election law. We ask that you stand with us – “WE the People” – and for Election Integrity. We need legislation to take us back to in-person voting (NO drop boxes, NO more” no excuse” mail-in ballots), absentee ballots only as prescribed prior to Act 77, voter ID, and same day voting. Please, on behalf of our posterity, secure their blessing of liberty. Take courage and fight and never give up. “We the People” need to have confidence that our vote counts!

Respectfully,
